

PRESS RELEASE

Issued – Friday 14th August 2009
For immediate release

Charity Skydive

One of AC Yule's customer support administrators Tracey Duncan has decided to strap herself into a parachute and jump out of a plane at 10,000 feet. The sky dive will be in aid of local Aberdeen charity Archie's Foundation, the official charity of the Aberdeen Children's Hospital and take place on 15th August at Auchterarder. After a colleague saw and advert on a bus for volunteers Tracey jumped at the chance of doing a sky dive as she has always wanted to do one. This will be Tracey's first skydive so she is trying not to think about it too much. On the day she will get a 30 minute briefing session including how to board and exit the plane!

Having a young relative that has needed the services of the Children's hospital has made Tracey appreciate the care and attention that is given to children at the hospital and made her help the local charity.

There will be 50+ people joining Tracey in Auchterarder for this sky dive. There are no nerves or butterflies yet, but we are betting there will be on the day!

Contact:

Kristin Gunn, AC Yule, kgunn@acyule.com, 01224 230000

No photos available

Notes to editors

Established in 1946, AC Yule has grown steadily to become one of the largest, and most respected, suppliers of glass, architectural aluminium and PVCu throughout Scotland and the north of England. With head quarters in Aberdeen and operations in Elgin, Livingston, Forfar, Glasgow and Boldon, we provide an efficient and flexible service to an outstanding range of clients. Please see our website for more information

www.acyule.com

